This type of conventional standardization system is used for forming a standard television picture which is transmitted to a video tape recorder provided at a headend system through a coaxial cable. However, this type of conventional standardization system has a drawback that an operator or user cannot use a video cassette recorder even if he or she wants to record a video tape in a video cassette recorder. Further, video tape recorders for recording a video signal of a broadcasting station are limited to only video tape recorders for only recording one video tape. Further, in the case of a video tape recordable by user, if a user wants to record video in the video tape recordable by user, it is impossible that he or she will use only a video tape recorder. A conventional video tape recorder selects one video tape recorder. This means that if a user wants to watch a video tape recorded in one video tape recorder, he or she needs to buy a video tape recorder which is compatible with that video tape recorder. Bottom Line: Then these transformed cells can differentiate into protein-synthesizing cells. We found that both wild-type and mutant Neu1 effectively reduced endocytosis and activated N-WASP, suggesting the important role of this adaptor protein in the regulation of endocytosis. The mutant Neu1 markedly reduced cell migration, which may contribute to the loss of interaction between heparan sulfate proteoglycan and its specific receptors. Our results indicate that the Src-mediated phosphorylation of Neu1 in the endosomal membrane is important for the functions of this adaptor protein. ABSTRACT: Previously, we have shown that the Src-mediated phosphorylation of Neu1 adaptor protein in the endosomal membrane is important for the functions of this adaptor protein. We investigated the molecular mechanism how S
