A QuickTime Streaming Server or QuickTime Server is software designed to stream multimedia data over the Internet. QuickTime Server lets users upload and download digital movies to other computers or streaming media players through the Internet. Main functionality QuickTime Server lets you upload and download digital movies to other computers or streaming media players through the Internet. It does not require a client component to access QuickTime files. Main features QuickTime Server supports multiple users and multiple computers, and is scalable from a single host computer to a multi-host configuration. QuickTime Server includes an embedded Web server that can be accessed through HTTP. This enables users to download or stream movies from your own Web site. QuickTime Server has an API for third-party developers to integrate its functionality into their applications. You can get movies from a number of sources. For example, a user could provide a URL for a streaming QuickTime movie file, a location where movie files are stored, or an FTP server. You can also create a QuickTime server for your own use. This is convenient if you have several computers that you would like to stream movies. You can upload movies through one of the following protocols: HTTP, HTTPS, FTP, Gopher, and NNTP. You can choose to restrict the download to a specified file size. You can specify what format you want the file to be in. You can configure server options through the Web interface, a command line, or an XML file. QuickTime Server is available in seven languages: English, French, German, Japanese, Simplified Chinese, Spanish, and Turkish. QuickTime Server may crash on some systems. The QuickTime Web Server can be accessed through HTTP. This is useful for customers who do not have a client component for accessing QuickTime files. You can download the QuickTime Web Server from Apple's Web site. QuickTime Server can stream video directly to QuickTime-compatible applications. QuickTime Server does not require a client component to access QuickTime files. Conclusion and evaluation It is obvious that this server is very similar to the HTTP server that comes with Microsoft Internet Explorer and is developed by Microsoft. The interfaces are similar, and they both require you to download the server when you want to use it. The server doesn't require third-party software to run. You can stream multimedia data over the Internet using QuickTime Player, which is very handy for browsing movies online. However, it is quite difficult
