The effect of the GABA analogs glycine and gamma-aminobutyric acid methyl ester on [3H]GABA binding in rat brain and spinal cord membranes was investigated. The effect of these analogs in the submicromolar concentration range was significant (10-30 microM) and was manifest as inhibition of [3H]GABA binding with a Ki value of 3-14 microM. Ethanol and the convulsant 4-aminopyridine were potent competitive inhibitors of [3H]GABA binding, with Ki values of approximately 3 and 55 microM, respectively. An asteroid that came close to hitting Earth this week did not pose a threat, but NASA wants to know a little more about it: what's its composition and what could happen if it were to collide with Earth? To find out, NASA has found a way to analyze asteroids for the first time with infrared telescopes, discovering the
